If Yale's Crew Goes to Henley, Cambridge Likely to Compete With Cornell, Pennsylvania and Columbia on the Hudson June 31 Date for This Year's Race.

The Harvard University crew may enter the intercollegiate regatta to be rowed the Hudson River at Poughkeepsie this year. It all depends upon the result of the negotiations for a renewal of athletic relations between Harvard and Yale. As the breach between Cambridge and New Haven appears to be widening and as Yale has threatened to send her 'Varsity crew to England to row in the Henley regatta, the chances for Harvard's appearance in the big race with Cornell, Pennsylvania and Columbia seem to be unusually bright. Harvard is on friendly terms with Cornell, Pennsylvania and Columbia. Though the Crimson severed football and baseball relations with Cornell a couple of years ago, it was not due to any difference of opinion. but chiefly because Harvard deemed it unwise to take on such important games as those with Cornell turned out to be in addition to the contests with Yale and Pennsylvania. Harvard has clung to her annual football game with Pennsylvania in spite of a determined effort on the part of Yale to induce the Cambridge men to throw the Quakers over. With Columbia the Crimson has played football for the last two years and would indulge in another contest next fall if the Blue and White eleven would consent to play again at Soldiers' Field

It was Harvard's stong plea that influenced Yale in asking Cornell to row in a three-cornered regatta at New London in 1898, and when Cornell concluded to row at Poughkeepsie after that Harvard was filled with regret. From time to time Harvard has been informally asked to join the Intercollegiate Rowing Association, but the agreement with Yale and the latter's desire for New London exclusiveness have made it impossible for the Cambridge navy to consider such a proposition seriously. Harvard and Yale both rowed at Poughkeepsie in 1897, but Yale objected to remaining in that regatta longer, and for that reason operations between the Blue and the Crimson were transferred to the Thames, with Cornell as an invited guest.

Last year the Poughkeepsie regatta was pronounced the most exciting ever held in America. It will be remembered that Corwas forced to break all previous records to defeat the Columbia crew, which also established record-breaking time. When this race was over there was a feeling of regret than Harvard and Yale, who had also indulged in a sensational race at New London, were unable to measure blades with Corneli, Columbia and the others in a race that would have definitely decided the intercollegiate rowing championship. With two regattas under way each year, it is but natural that there should be a di-vision of interest among college rowing

Both Harvard and Yale are capable of Both Harvard and Yale are capable of turning out fast crews, although they do not depend upon coaching by professionals. Cornell is coached by Charles Courtney, Columbia by Edward Haulan and Penn-sylvania by Ellis Ward, while Wisconsin's crew, which will probably not be seen in the East this year, has been instructed by the East this year, has been instructed by Andrew O'Dea. If Harvard decides to row at Poughkeepsie, therefore, the crew, coached by Graduate Storrow, will have to face at least three eights prepared by the best professional rowing instructors in this country. But Harvard usually has a wealth of rowing material in hand; more of it, in fact, than that produced at the other of it, in fact, than that produced at the other universities, so that the Crimson would not be at a disadvantage in any way.

If Yale decides definitely to go to Henley, Harvard men say that they will not only send the Crimson 'Varsity to Poughkeepsie, but that when Yale tires of the trip to England and is ready to seek another dual alliance with Cambridge, the New Haven crew will be compelled to enter the Poughkeepsie regatta or remain out in the coid. Yale's contemplated trip to Henley does Yale's contemplated trip to Henley does not find much favor among the undergrad-uates and alumni of that university for the reason that it seems a hopeless task to win over there. Cornell has failed and so has Yale before this. Only last year Pennsylvania sent what

Only last year Pennsylvania sent what was considered a phenomenal crew to Henley, but met defeat in a way that was discouraging to American oarsmen. That Yale should try again, under the circumstances, seems to be stretching the point considerably. But if there is a break between Harvard and Yale, the New Haven crew will have to go to England, for those in charge of aquatics at Yale are strongly opposed to taking part in the Hudson River event. Harvard has already intimated that football relations with Princeton will be renswed in the event of a break with Yale, so that it can be seen that the Crimson can play another trump card in rowing affairs by making an application to the Intercollegiate Rowing Association for admission.

Intercollegiate Rowing Association for admission.

The stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association, consisting of Prof. Durand of Cornell, F. S. Bangs of Columbia and Thomas Reath of Pennsylvania, held their annual meeting in this city yesterday. They decided to hold the annual regata at Poughkeepsie on June 31. There will be no single scull event, but the programme will include a four-oared race of two miles, an eight-oared freshman race of two miles and an eight-oared 'Varsity race of four miles. Columbia, Cornell and Pennsylyania are sure competitors in these events. vania are sure competitors in these events. Invitations will be sent to Syracuse, George-town and Wisconsin to enter crews, too. When told of the proposition to have Har-vard in the big regatta, the stewards said that they knew nothing about it and had not discussed the matter at all.

Billy Ryan Gets Decision Over Tommy Daly.

New London, Feb. 12.—At the New London Opera House last evening Billy Ryan of Syra-cuse received the decision over Tommy Daly of New York in a 20-round bout, which went the limit. Both boxers fought a draw here a few days ago and a thousand persons were in attendance last night. Daly was on the aggressive the first half of the bout, but Ryan played a waiting game of the bout, but Ryan played a waiting game and apparently relied upon his experience in the ring to wear his opponent out. Daly's nose was tapped in the second round and his left eye nearly closed in the twelfth, but he fought gamely and was still in good condition and fighting fast when the linal gong sounded. Ryan outclassed his adversary in scientific work, but Daly kept the Syracuse boy guessing with his terrific left-handed swings, that would have put Ryan asleep several times only for his shiftness.

A preliminary of eight rounds between Hugh O'Neill of West Haven and Walter Jennings of New Haven ended in a draw, Jennings was slated to meet Kid Conlin of Hartford, but the latter failed to show up.

WOOD WINS TWO SKATING RACES Good Sport on Verena Lake Attracts Large Crowd.

Five races were skated on Verena Lake yesterday afternoon and each furnished a good contest and pleased about 2.500 per-sons who had gathered to witness the sport. The ice was in fine condition and there was little wind. M. Wood, who recently won the one and three-mile championships, was successful in winning the quarter-mile invi-tation and the half-mile scratch races. He also started in the handicaps, but was hope-lessly out of these events, although he skated very fast. In the invitation race the starters were Wood, Sinnirud, Harry McDonald, Bob Paulding and James Wray. Sinnirud got off in the lead and kept in front until around the first turn. Then Wood went up and, passing Sinnirud, kept in front, winning by two yards. Wray was a close third. The time, 40 1-5 seconds, is only a second behind the record. Paulding, the holder of the 100 and 150-yard records, could not stand

The all the way and won by three yards, with Sinnirud again second and Wray third. The inile handicap was won by Free of Tarrytown, but he was protested because, it is said, he has won races of which he made no report in his entry. Gus Stolz finished second, but was disqualified for fouling Sarony and Smith. This disqualification placed Swan second and Sarony third. In the two-mile race, a handicap which was won by W. W. Swan, M. Wood started from scratch and skated the first mile in 2 minutes 55 seconds and at the finish was close up to the winner, but the three placed men had such long handicaps and made such a hot pace that he had no chance to win. The summary follows:

Quarter-Mile Invitation, Scratch—Won by M. Wood, Verona Lake S. C.; Second: James Wray, Nassau B. C., third. Time, 40 15 seconds.

Competitions on Snowy Links Bring Out Fairly Good Scores.

A new policy was inaugurated for the year at the St. Andrews Golf Club with good suc-cess, for the conservative policy regarding competitions which has been in force for three seasons and found to be lacking in merit has been cancelled, and for the season day had a splendid outing in the most bracing of weather, while the golfing conditions were very fair for the time of the year. There was some fine sport yesterday at the Baltusrol Golf Club with informal competitions at squash and a medal play handicap on the links for a cup and minor prizes. The course was quite playable, for the putting greens were swept clean, and there was snow only on the sheltered parts of the links. Hugh K. Toler made the fine score of 88, which won the gross honors, and the cup went to L. Calkins, who returned a net card of 81 from a handicap of twelve. The summary:

English, Kellar, O'Driscoll, Hyde, Griffin and Anderson, the younger division, who looked to be on their last legs on Tuesday were, strange to say, still in the contest this

The Australians, Matthew Diehl and August T. Horst departed from the scene of their troubles at 11:28 o'clock with a score of 246 miles. Horst's feet had been in frightful condition since Monday evening, but he kept going despite torture.

For a man who performed things queer enough for an escaped lunatic Carroll, the Indian's partner, looked pretty sensible last night. In the forenoon of yesterday he was reported to have made a wild dash into the street and would have flown to parts unknown had he not been lassooed by one of the trainers. Afterward Carroll ploughed along pretty evenly and helped the Indian to regain a lot of lost ground. Both have settied down to work steadily and should they continue in the same gait as that of yesterday evening they are sure to rake in a share of the shekels.

Committee were adopted on a mere reading of the old and corrected rules. Phrases were here and there stricken out or added and some words having an important bearing were incorporated. The clause bearing on calling of heats after sunset was discussed, and, as localities affect conditions largely, it was voted to decide "sunset" by the calendar it was voted to decide "sunset" by the calendar and not by the actual dropping of "Old Solbehind some nearby western hilltop. Mr. Colcord, who said he came from a mountainous region, brought up the question as to official definition of the sunset hour. The suggestion to change the distance ground was lost and it remains; on mile tracks, 80 yards, except where eight or more horses start, in which case it is 100 yards; on half-mile tracks, 100 and 159 yards. The matter of walving distance under certain conditions was discussed at considerable length. Col. E. S. Edwards of Newark said in his capacity as starter he had found waiving of distance invariably fraught with disaster because of parties to the race making claims that they had not given sanction to removing the flagman. The vote decided conclusively that distance be waived when consented to, and the measure became law.

The member from Concord, N. H. Scott Locke, presented an amendment whereby officials could, when convinced of fraud declare void and "no heat" any such heat. As at present framed only the deciding heat can be so declared "no heat". He was argued a gainst by C. A. Willis and one or two others. Andrew Welch, a penciller as well as track manager, took the floor.

The worst a man gets to-day," he said in his emphatic way, "is his money back." He did not favor declaring any heats "no heats," save where fraudulent methods were pronounced. Collisions and accidents were not to be considered grounds for such declaration, but deliberate pulling of starters to defraud, collusion among the parties to the races and such evident four practices should he summarily checked, not to await the concluding or deciding heat of any race. The Hartford track owner, when the question was put to vote, lost, 192 to 10t.

Regarding suppression of time it was decided to fine officials of time it was decided to fine officials of time it was decided to fine officials.

Rule 24, section 2, dealing with officially racing horses when not eligible, was reworded. It now reads: and not by the actual dropping of "Old Sol" behind some nearby western hilltop. Mr.

resterday that the Massachusetts Stake for the 2:12 class, trotting, heretofore $10,000, will be $15,000 this season and a $5,000 stake opened for 2:30 trotters and for 2:4 class pacers; a $5,000 stakes for 2:16 trotters and for 2:10 pacers, and a $2,000 stake for three-year-old 2:25 plass trotters. Entries close on March 16, racing to be on the "Brighton Beach plan," sending non-heat winners from the races at the end of the third heat.

NORRIS'S FIRST DEFEAT. Sigourney Wine in the Billiard Tournsment-Dr. Mial's Big Run.

Interest in yesterday afternoon's game in the A. A. U. billiard tournament was at a high pitch from start to finish. W. H. Sigourney of California and Charles Norris of New York, were the players and Sigourney gave the New Yorker his first defeat. score was 400 to 345. This made three men, Sigourney, Norris and Mial, tied for first place. The game drew the largest matines crowd of the tourney. Tom Reed was spectator, impassive but paying the closest attention to every shot—a billiard lover, evidently. It started off slowly, but soon became brisk and interesting. The century was spirited and full of good play. Sigourney got his counts largely in streaks. while Norris was steadler but less brilliant. Norris completed his 100 points first. Bigourney for the first time in a week showed flashes of his real form. He made a beauti-ful run of 64 in his fourteenth inning by nursing that was masterly—the acme of delicacy and finished technique.

The graceful, polished style of the Canfornian was a treat contrasting sharply with several of his previous exhibitions. He had recovered some of his knack of landing on the second ball with precision without the probability of a miss. His nineteenth inning probability of a miss. His nineteenth inning was broad in its repertoire, scintillating with difficult shots at both close and long range. He made 120 points in six consecutive innings and in nineteen innings his total was 161 to Norris's 149. Sigourney's follows were particularly good. Sigourney made his 200 first and then Norris, who knows no such word as defeat, pulled himself together after a slump, drew up close to Sigourney with a run of 41, marked by good position piay and covering a wide expanse of the green.

The harder they roll for Norris the harder position play and covering a wide expanse of the green.

The harder they roll for Norris the harder he tries and every one of a run of 20 that put him within 5 of Sigourney was earned, as much by persistence as by skill. The rame at times assumed a feast or a famine nature. There was either little doing or much and the frequency of small innings cut down the average considerably. Safety play was partly responsible for additional innings, but the closeness of the struggle made it exceptionally attractive. Sigourney was stronger at the finish and won out. The score:

Paris papers just received here contain accounts of games in the French tournament in which a strong quartet of Parisian experts took part-Vignaux, Cure, Fournil and Gibelin. They played 45-centimetre balk line-about 18 inches-two shots in. In the first game Cure beat Gibelin, 500 to 443, the first game Cure beat Gibelin, 500 to 443, the former averaging 11.95 and the latter 10.80. In the last four innings Cure made 263 points. Cure also beat the veteran Vignaux, the score being 500 to 473 and the averages again being good. The game was played in twenty-eight innings.

Newman and Bash were the players yesterday afternoon in the 14-inoh balk-line tournament at Daly's. Newman won. Wefers defeated Hill in the evening. The scores:
